Cory was the salesman who worked with us on replacing the siding on our home. From the first meeting he showed a genuine interest in filling our wants and needs, and I really felt he was more of a consultant than a salesman. He talked about several possible solutions-pros and cons of each- and we decided to go with James Hardie Siding. I was nervous about the cost but we were able to make a deal for a reasonable price. He cautioned us that there could be additional costs if damage was found, etc. He called back in the weeks following to advise that some of their other projects were being delayed due to material ability and asked if they could start on the house the following week. We agreed and the crew showed up ready to work. I did not get to know any of the installers by name but they did a fantastic job, made repairs where necessary and completed the job in about six days, returning a seventh day to touch up and make final adjustments and clean up. The project manager stopped by several days during the installation and supervised the crew, then arranged to have gutters and gutter guards installed. We are very happy with the look of our home, the workmanship as well as the customer service. There were no added costs [which my wife feared] and we feel very good about the product and workmanship. I highly recommend Siding Repair Systems and James Hardie products.

I needed an emergency repair on the house. Siding Repair Systems sent Jim out to assess my situation. Jim sized up the project and came up with a plan to replace a large section of siding on the back of the house to match the rest of the house. The price was suprisingly affordable. Within two and a half weeks the siding was up and the house was repaired beautifully. Thank you Siding Repair Systems!

We had been dragging our feet because we're not sold on vinyl siding and that's what everyone seems to be replacing their siding with around here. Then one day a very nice fella (Dan) stopped by and asked if we were thinking about replacing our siding. We said yes, but told him about not wanting vinyl. Although they do many vinyl jobs, it turns out they were an 'authorized' installer for 'James Hardie' siding. We were familiar with this product and liked it very much. When he told us it comes in colors, we wanted more information and we're very interested. We set up an appointment and their salesman Cory came out a few days later. We walked the perimeter of the house twice. He 'listened' to every idea, dream and wish list we had. We threw a low number at him. They were very willing to work with us and our budget. We were impressed. But we kept adding things. Finally, we gave him our final number and asked if they could do the whole shebang. He thought about it. We took out something which we were agreeable to do and we had a deal we were excited about. The crew that came to install is very talented and they listened and accommodated our desires throughout the arduous process. Now we have a 'brand new looking' home and have the same pride and joy we had when we bought this home 35 years ago. We absolutely love the results and highly recommend this fine company for your siding needs.
